Washington DC Internships (Award: $3000 Stipend, $500 Travel)

Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation Internships are open to master's, professional, legal, medical, and pre-doctoral students in all disciplines with interests in international affairs. These internships allow graduate students from a broad range of fields to gain valuable practical experience in Washington DC and contacts for future career opportunities. Applicants should identify potential internship opportunities with D.C. based international affairs organizations that will provide experience relevant to the student's academic and/or career objectives. Applicants do not have to be returning students to be eligible.

Internship applications are due Monday, January 22, 2007. Applications will be available in December on our website: <http://www-igcc.ucsd.edu/cprograms/cprogramsindex.php>

Dissertation Fellowships (Award: $16,000 Stipend, up to $4,000 Travel/Research)

Currently enrolled UC doctoral graduate students in any discipline, who will have advanced to candidacy for their doctorate by June 30, 2007, are eligible to apply for a dissertation fellowship. Successful proposals will address IGCC's goal of understanding international conflict and promoting cooperation among nations. The international sources and/or consequences of the phenomenon studied must be an integral part of the project. In addition to the standard fellowships, IGCC offers the IGCC Washington D.C. Fellowship in Foreign Policy Studies and the Herbert York Fellowship in Science and International Policy. Smaller travel/research grants are also available.

Fellowship applications are due Thursday, February 1, 2007. Applications submitted through Apply Yourself website beginning in December 2006. For more information visit our website: <http://www-igcc.ucsd.edu/cprograms/cprogramsindex.php>

IGCC Faculty Grants

Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation supports University of California faculty research projects. Last year, a total of $100,000.00 was distributed to successful faculty grant applicants across the UC system. Successful applicants are eligible to receive up to $40,000 for a collaborative multi-campus research project that involves two or more UC campuses. Multi-campus projects must still fall within IGCC's mission and demonstrate feasibility for becoming larger scale foundation or government-funded projects. The faculty grant proposals are evaluated on their quality and on their relevance to IGCC's goal of understanding international conflict and promoting cooperation among nations in political, economic, and environmental affairs. IGCC is seeking innovative approaches to international cooperation and conflict resolution.

Faculty Grant applications are due Monday, February 12, 2007. Applications will be available in December on our website: <http://www-igcc.ucsd.edu/cprograms/cprogramsindex.php>
