China’s High-Technology Trade and Investment with Major Partners
July 23-24, 2012

Speaker biographies

Bernt BERGER is a Senior Researcher with the SIPRI China and Global Security Programme. He has almost two decades of work and study experience in China including hands-on work in political development. Besides in work on China he has combined his expertise in security studies and East and Southeast Asia. During his work at SWP in Berlin he intensively engaged in policy advising among Ministries, Parliament and the Government. His recent work involves China’s foreign and security policy in the neighbourhood including Burma, Pakistan, India, Afghanistan and Central Asia. Furthermore he focused on regional security in East Asia, EU-China relations and developments inside China. Bernt Berger has lived in China for 4 years. He has carried out professional travel to more than 20 countries. At SIPRI he has taken up research on science and technology transfers between Europe and China.

Oliver BRÄUNER joined SIPRI in April 2010. He currently works as a Researcher for the China and Global Security Programme at SIPRI, mainly on EU-China science and technology cooperation. He holds a Masters Degree in Chinese Studies, Law and Political Science from Heidelberg University, Germany. Oliver has previously worked as an intern for the German Federal Foreign Office, the Research Division Asia of the German Institute for International and Security Affairs (SWP) and the German Bundestag.

Tai Ming CHEUNG is Director of the UC Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (IGCC). Cheung also manages IGCC's Northeast Asia Cooperation Dialogue (NEACD), a Track Two program that brings together senior foreign ministry and defense officials as well as academics from the United States, China, Japan, South Korea, North Korea, and Russia for informed discussions on regional security issues. He also oversees the "The Future of Multilateral Security Cooperation in Northeast Asia: Exploring Regional Security Architecture and the Economics-Security Nexus," a research project in collaboration with the University of Tokyo and Yonsei University funded by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation as well as the Institute's Project on the Study of Innovation and Technology in China (SITC). Cheung serves as an associate adjunct professor at the School of International Relations and Pacific Studies at UC San Diego and is a long-time analyst of Chinese and East Asian defense and national security affairs. Cheung was based in Asia from the mid-1980s to 2002 covering political, economic and strategic developments in greater China. He was also a journalist and political and business risk consultant in northeast Asia. Cheung received his Ph.D. from the War Studies Department at King's College, London University in 2006. His latest book, Fortifying China: The Struggle to Build a Modern Defense Economy, was published by Cornell University Press in 2009.
Yoram EVRON is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Asian Studies at the University of Haifa and a Research Fellow at the Institute for National Security Studies (INSS), Tel Aviv. He has served as a Visiting Fellow at the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS), Nanyang Technological University. Dr. Evron's research interests include theories and practices of China's national security, military development and military procurement, and China-Middle East relations. He holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of Haifa.

Bates GILL has a long record of research and publication on international and regional security issues, including regarding arms control, non-proliferation, peacekeeping and military-technical development, especially with regard to China and Asia. In recent years, his work has broadened to encompass other contemporary security-related trends, including multilateral security organizations, the impact of domestic politics and development on the foreign policies of states, and the nexus of public health and security. Dr. Gill was appointed by the Swedish government to become the seventh director of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI), starting in October 2007.

Vasily KASHIN is a senior research fellow at the Center for Analysis of Strategies and Technologies in Moscow. Prior to his position with CAST, he was deputy chief of the Beijing office of the Russian Information Agency (RIA) Novosti. From 2001-2009 he was a senior researcher at the Center for Research of Russian-Chinese Relations at the Institute for Far Eastern Studies in Moscow. He has also worked for Vedomosti business newspaper as the deputy editor of the international department. Kashin has served as an attache for the Foreign Affairs Ministry of Russia in Mongolia. He graduated from the Institute for Asian and African Studies at Moscow State University in 1996 and also studied financial management at the State University of Management in Moscow.

Jon LINDSAY is a postdoctoral scholar with the University of California Institute on Global Conflict and Cooperation (IGCC). He received his Ph.D. in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, M.S. in computer science and B.S. in cognitive science from Stanford University, and has served as an intelligence officer in the U.S. Navy. His research focuses broadly on the problems of knowledge in complex systems, with particular emphasis on the role of information technology in international security. Specific research topics include the strategic problems posed by emerging cyberwarfare capabilities, the capacity for "user innovation" as a component of military power, and the operational challenges of irregular warfare under conditions of high technology and complexity. His dissertation, "Information Friction: Information Technology and Military Performance," draws on fieldwork with a U.S. special operations unit in Iraq and historical casework to explain the social conditions under which uncertainty-reducing technologies can themselves generate additional uncertainty. He is presently working to broaden the information friction framework in order to understand how emerging information technologies affect Chinese military power.
Tomoo MARUKAWA is currently Associate Professor at the Institute of Social Science, University of Tokyo. He worked in the Institute of Developing Economies until the end of March this year since his graduation from Faculty of Economics, University of Tokyo in 1987. He studied in Beijing from 1991 to 1993 as a visiting scholar at the Institute of Industrial Economics, Chinese Academy of Social Sciences. During his work in Institute of Developing Economies, he wrote articles related to the Chinese state-owned enterprises reform, industrial development, industrial policy, and distribution networks. Recently, he has started working on Vietnamese state-owned enterprises as well.

Barry NAUGHTON’s most recent book is The Chinese Economy: Transitions and Growth, a comprehensive survey of the Chinese economy that was published by MIT Press at the beginning of 2007. Naughton is an economist and professor at the University of California, San Diego, who was named the So Kuanlok Professor of Chinese and International Affairs at the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies in 1998. Naughton has published extensively on the Chinese economy, with a focus on four interrelated areas: economic transition; industry and technology; foreign trade; and Chinese political economy. His pioneering study of Chinese economic reform, Growing Out of the Plan: Chinese Economic Reform, 1978-1993 (New York: Cambridge University Press, 1995) won the Masayoshi Ohira Memorial Prize.

Naughton’s research on economic interactions among China, Taiwan and Hong Kong, focusing on the electronics industry, led to the edited volume The China Circle: Economics and Technology in the PRC, Taiwan and Hong Kong (Brooking Institution, 1997). Since then, Naughton has continued to follow the electronics industry and technology policy in China and Taiwan, and has published several solo and co-authored articles on related subjects. A recent volume, co-edited with Dali Yang, is entitled Holding China Together: Diversity and National Integration in the Post-Deng Era (New York: Cambridge University Press, 2004). Naughton publishes quarterly analysis of China’s economic policy online at China Leadership Monitor.

Bun Soon PARK is a senior fellow at Samsung Economic Research Institute (SERI) which is a private think tank in Korea. He received his masters in economics at Korea University and his Ph.D at Hankuk University of Foreign Studies. Dr. Park was a researcher at Korea Institution for Industrial Economics and Trade (KIET) before moving to SERI. His major research area is Southeast Asian economics and East Asian economic integration. He has written numerous articles and books on East Asian economies such as “East Asia as an Economic Community” (SERI, 2010), “The FTA Policy of Korea”(SERI, 2003), "Power Shift in the Asian Economy" (SERI, 2002), "Changes in the Business Strategy of Ethnic Chinese Enterprises in Southeast Asia since the Financial Crisis"(KIEP, 2001), and " The Crisis and Restructuring of Southeast Asian Corporations"(SERI, 2000).

Dr. Park has contributed several book chapters in Korean and English and he has also edited a number of books including "China Rising: East Asian Responses" and “Study on Korean and Taiwanese Investment Patterns in China” which were the results of his cooperative work with East Asian scholars and institutions.
Ricardo SENNES is a managing partner at Prospectiva Consulting since its foundation in 2002. Specialist in political scenarios in Brazil and Latin America, international geopolitics, innovation policy, strategic planning in internationalization processes and design of public policies, Ricardo also has long experience leading projects in sectors such as infrastructure, energy (specially oil & gas), aerospace industry and defense, health, information technology, telecommunications and financial services. He is responsible for the overall coordination of Prospectiva's strategic projects, methodological approaches and analytical tools. He developed an extensive academic work in the fields of international relations, political science and economics. He has several articles, papers and books published in Brazil and abroad, and often participates in public debates and television shows. He holds a PhD and MA in Political Science (USP) and BA in economics (PUC-SP). He is the current coordinator of GACINT (international relations think tank at the University of São Paulo - USP). He is a member of the editorial boards of Foreign Affairs Latin America and Política Externa magazines, as well as member of the Strategic Studies Board at FIESP.

Cynthia WATSON earned a Master's in Economic History from the London School of Economics and a Doctorate in Government & International Studies from the University of Notre Dame. Dr. Watson served as Associate Dean at the National War College between 1997 and 2002, having taught there since 1992. She was Assistant Dean for Social Sciences and a member of the Political Science Department at Loyola University Chicago and a member of the Politics Department at Ithaca College before coming to the War College. Dr. Watson was on the staff of the House Subcommittee on Government Information in the 1970s as well as a staff auditor for the General Accounting Office for three years before engaging in graduate work.

Her sabbatical project for AY 2003-2004 examined the competition between the PRC and Taiwan for access to South America, with emphasis on military relations. She has written extensively on nuclear developments, conventional arms issues, political violence and civil military relations in the Third World. Other research interests are military involvement in transnational issues and the effects they have on civil-military relations in China. ABC Clio in Santa Barbara, California published her most recent book, Nation-Building, in July 2004. Her prior books include National Security in the Contemporary Issues Series (ABC Clio, 2002), Political Role of the Military, co-edited with Constantine Danopolous (Greenwood, 1996), and National Security Policy Groups (Greenwood, 1990). She has penned many articles as well.

Between 2000 and 2001, Dr. Watson co-directed the National Defense University team for the Middle States Association reaccreditation. Dr. Watson has served as the Secretary for the Inter-University Seminar on Armed Forces & Society and serve on the Governing Board of the International Studies Association. She is a member of the International Institute for Strategic Studies and is on the Editorial Board of Third World Quarterly. She is a popular and highly-sought speaker on national security issues, including appearances on radio and television shows from Australia to Europe to Chicago. Dr. Watson is Spanish-certified as a native speaker for Recording for the Blind and Dyslexic.